A contest that has excited the musical world for the past few months has been settled by the election of Joseph Barnby as Principal of the Guildhall School of Music. This school was started twelve years ago by caldidates for the position of Principal. The salary is only £800, but the school has grown so rapidly that it bids fair to take a position equal to that held by the Royal Academy of Music. Prof. Barnby had the support of Sir of Music in the University of Oxford and President of the Musical Association; Alexander Campbell Mackenzie, Principal of the Royal Academy of Music, and others.
